TWO POLITICIANS.

They Talk on the Senatorial Situation.

There were two leading politicians in town on Sunday, C. C. Wallace and Mr. Hummell, editor of the Wadsworth Dispatch.

Mr. Wallace passed through to Virginia City in the morning and returned on the evening train.

When asked what he thought of the Senatorial question he looked quite blank and pulled out a fine Havana cigar from his pocket. The APPEAL man at once went down into the depth of his pocket for a pen knife to use in cutting the nub off the cigar and also began to dig for matches.

Mr. Wallace felt in his pocket again and finding it was his last cigar went to the counter of the Arlington ostensibly to get another, but in an absent minded way lit it and came back blowing great clouds of smoke at the reporter. He then sat down and uncorked himself.

"You see my boy you shouldn't ask me these questions about the fight, but I never had a reputation of fighting at all shy of the press. I'll be candid with you and tell you just what I think of it, but not for publication of course.

"The matter is just in this shape and ———— d 1 2? XXX— Now that's the cold bed rock business and you can rely on it."

"How about the non-residence business?"

"Well, my idea is just this, and you can tell 'em I say so if you like. It's just simply ———— 1—2? ————, now don't you think so?"

Before the reporter could reply he started in in a most voluble way characteristic of Wallace when he gets warmed up.

"You see Jones stands just in this way ———— 1—2? ————, and as for Nixon, who is also a friend of mine, I regard his candidacy as ———— XXX? ————"

"But Mr. Wallace suppose the ———— Yes I know, I think as you do on that. But I must catch the train and if I pick up any further information on the situation I'll wire you from the next station. I'm not of course talking for publication, I never do, but if what I have told you will do the cause any good you are at liberty to publish it, but not as coming from me of course. Good bye old boy, and if you pick up anything new drop me a line."

In a moment he was on his way to the train.

Mr. Hummell next showed up. He was more communicative than Mr. Wallace and less reserved. He said that he was for Nixon first, last and all the time, and that he had twenty votes pledged and more promised. He was making a fight for Nevada for Nevadans, and the eastern part of the State was up in arms for Nixon and the press was also getting in with both feet.

There would be at least a hundred men when the legislature met in Carson helping Nixon to his flight, and that he had a power behind him that the Jones forces did not dream of. He was reticent as to details, but seemed to have the utmost confidence that the principles for which Nixon was fighting would eventually win. He left on last night's train.

The Hartley Case.

The Carson News, in commenting on a five line jot from the Silver State in regard to the fact that every paper of any moment in this State expresses a wish that Mrs. Hartley be granted a pardon as a New Year's gift from the board of pardon, has the following:—

That's not surprising. Many people would like to see Durrant receive the same New Year's gift and there are scores of people working for Mrs. Maybrick's release.—Carson News.

We do not know of a paper in the United States that has expressed a wish or advocated in any manner, shape or form the pardon of such a criminal as Durrant. Is there anyone but his parents who wishes to see the brutal murderer of two young girls (who were murdered, according to the evidence, merely for the sake of satisfying a fiendish desire, which desire was gained after the soul had left the bodies) pardoned? We say, no. How can any intelligent person class the names of Mrs. Hartley and Mrs. Maybrick with that of Durrant? The pardon of the two women is most certainly approved by the press, and why not.—Silver State.

In the Nye County murder case the preliminary examination of the supposed murderer of Robert Gillespie who was killed about two months ago and at the time of his death was superintendent at the Sterling Mining Company at Montgomery Nye county, Nevada comes up for hearing early this week at Belmont. District attorney Been of Eureka has been engaged to prosecute the case.

THE JONES CASE

The Defendant Puts in a Plea of "No Jurisdiction."

The case of the State vs. Jones charged with an assault with brass knuckles was called in Judge Mack's Court yesterday morning.

The defendant was represented by Gen. R. M. Clarke, ex-Congressman Woodburn and James Dennis. The attorneys for defendant had already demurred to the jurisdiction of the court and the case came up in argument on the demurrer.

It was alleged that the assault took place on land belonging to the U. S. Government and that therefore the crime was only punishable by the U. S. Court, which had jurisdiction over all offenses committed on Government property.

District Attorney McGowan, for the State, cited a long list of authorities to show that the State in deeding a piece of land to the U. S. Government, held jurisdiction over all criminal common law offenses, unless that right was conveyed to the general Government in specific terms and cited the act of the Legislature to show that the State had not parted with its authority in any such way and that the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States was only exercised in cases of forts, arsenals, dock yards, etc., from which, for obvious reasons, it was policy to exclude the public.

In his reply Mr. Woodburn congratulated Mr. McGowan upon the showing he had made, but argued along with General Clark that the Government still had the right under United States laws to handle all offenses committed on its ground.

Gen. Clark followed in a long argument and cited numerous authorities. Recess until 1:30.

In the afternoon the legal battle continued, the District Attorney arrayed single handed against three distinguished attorneys. The Court finally over ruled the demurrer on the ground that the State, in its act conveying the land of block 42 to the U. S. Government, reserved the right of criminal jurisdiction. A fight next followed against the validity of the indictment to the effect that brass knuckles were not deadly weapons. This was also overruled, and the case set for trial for February 1st.

John Piper Dead.

The sad intelligence of the death of John Piper, the veteran show man, reached Carson yesterday. Piper after a prolonged illness, breathed his last in a San Francisco hospital Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Piper's name is connected with the earliest incidents of the Coast and Nevada, having come to San Francisco in 1850 he witnessed its wildest era and obtained his theatrical experience under the liveliest circumstances—when actor's carcasses decorated the lamp posts, if they failed to come up to par. He arrived in Virginia in 1859 just as the first silver was removed from the Comstock lode.

Most of the great actors of the world have played under his management and he was known as "Old Hoss John Piper" all over the United States.

DIED.

In this city, Sunday, January 3rd 1897, Velma Maria, youngest daughter of the late Elisha and Abbie F. Crain, a native of Vermont.

Miss Crain has been sick for the past two years and through her severe illness, without a murmur, with a goodbye to her dear one, she went down into the valley of the shadow of death.

She was a sister of Mrs. E. F. Raymond, Mrs. J. T. Cochran, Mrs. C. W. Friend and G. M. Crain.

The funeral takes place at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The report that Miss Maud McCullum died in Empire Sunday is denied. The young lady has a large circle of friends in this city who sincerely hope for her speedy recovery.

The smoke black coaches and engine on the passenger train were substituted by an entire new train yesterday morning.

L. H. Bell secured the contract for furnishing groceries to the Prison, and John Wagner the meat.
